

ABSTRACT

The invention relates to a method for detecting disease-associated autoantibodies, which recognize extracellular structures of G protein-coupled receptors, and to the use of peptides, which comprise these loops or fragments thereof, for treating autoimmune diseases.